KIMBERLY MANALILI

Kimberly Manalili is a third year PhD candidate in Health Services Research in the Department of Community Health Sciences at the University of Calgary and a Vanier Canada Graduate Scholar. She holds a Master of Public Health (Global Health) from the University of Alberta. Her research interests include: implementation science, quality improvement, patient-oriented research, mixed methods, policy, and primary care. Kimberly's doctoral research aims to enhance person-centred care practice in primary care through the use of quality indicators that will identify gaps and target needed improvements that are important to patients. Her research will inform future implementation, scale and spread of the indicators across primary care in Alberta. Kimberly also works as a researcher and volunteer with the Department of Strategic Partnerships and Community Engagement at the University of Calgary. In these roles, she provides support to global health research in Uganda and Tanzania, which focus on the implementation and evaluation of district-wide Maternal, Newborn, and Child Health projects. This is her second year on the CAHSPR Student Working Group.
