MÉLANIE ANN SMITHMAN

Mélanie Ann Smithman is a PhD candidate in Health Sciences Research at Université de Sherbrooke in Quebec. She is the recipient of a doctoral award from Quebec's Strategy for Patient-Oriented Research (SPOR) SUPPORT Unit and the Fonds de recherche Québec – Santé. She holds a Bachelor in International Development Studies from McGill University and a Master's in Public Health from Université de Montréal. Mélanie Ann is also a TUTOR-PHC alumni, a pan Canadian transdisciplinary program in primary healthcare research.

She is involved in studies on access to primary healthcare, healthcare innovations, spread and scale of innovations, quality improvement, and capacity building. Mélanie Ann is currently the co-chair of the capacity building and professional development component at Réseau-1, Quebec's Primary and Integrated Health Care Innovations Network (PIHCIN). This is Mélanie Ann's third year in the CAHSPR Student Working Group (SWG) and her second year as chair of the SWG's networking committee.
