ROSE GAGNON

Rose Gagnon, MPT, MSc, is a physiotherapist, a PhD candidate in Clinical and Biomedical Sciences and a graduate of the short program in Health Technology Assessment at Université Laval. She recently completed a pan-Canadian training program in primary health care research (TUTOR-PHC) at the University of Western Ontario. During her master's degree, she developed a pilot project in collaboration with the CHU de Québec to evaluate a physiotherapy service offer in the emergency department. Her doctoral project, funded by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research, aims to evaluate the economic impact of this service offer. Her research interests focus on the impact of health system financing, its effect on equity and access to services, and the impact of health system privatization.
